Mistress Psyche explains the process of choosing the right Mistress in this technological age...

Once upon a time if you wanted to book a session with a Mistress you'd have to look in the back of a classified magazine or find a little card in a phone box with an often barely legible monochrome image and a landline number.

Your 'choice' would be between various strap lines pushing various fantasy propositions like 'no school dinners but lashings of strict discipline' or to 'be her chair if you dare'

Or which landline number was actually legible or connecting.

affectionately nicknamed 'tart cards' and like the phone box that used to exhibit displays of illicit advertising art.

With the advent of social media, advert dominatrix services has moved beyond prints and landline numbers sometime marker pen but one thing never changed of photoshop and filters and the rest of industry that often functions in the shadow of an unregulated industry.

You still have no idea whether the Mistress
