Lipstick has also always had associations of glamour throughout history

Lipstick was invented thousands of years ago in ancient Mesopotamia for status, beauty and ritual. Wealthy Mesopotamians used crushed gemstones like lapis lazuli and minerals to create rich, indulgent lip colour and this practice evolved across cultures.

Ancient Egyptians used red ochre and crushed, high end, luxury insects (like cochineal beetles) for vibrant, opulent colours with lip colour denoting luxury and social rank.

In ancient Greece, lipstick was associated with prostitutes. which you should remember when applying yours.

This association continued to the modern day. Hitler banned the use of lipstick in nazi Germany due to the these connotations leading to Winston Churchill encouraging its use as a morale booster and a symbol of patriotism.
